'Bad' Day Celebration for Barons...

and Fireworks for All...

Monday November 28th

"November 28th 2004 was a 'bad' day for Barons in Scotland, including our own local dignitaries Prestoungrange and Dolphinstoun. They lost their feudal powers after 1000 years to place miscreants in the stocks, or to fine them up to 40/- Scots. However our own locals did not depart with a whimper. Not only were the town's 81 Witches Pardoned but the Court also declared November 28th would henceforth be celebrated as Barons' Day, which means 'baronial party-time' and a brilliant fireworks display.

Whilst the Barons are an invitation affair already sold out to a galaxy of Scotland's other Barons, the evening concludes with Fireworks For All over the Firth of Forth.

Absolutely everyone in town is invited to the Fireworks Display. Craig Allen, Head Brewer at the Gothenburg, has created special Barons' Ales for the occasion which will be on sale in the James Fewell Bar and the Bistro together with the most excellent bar meals/ snacks."
